An Astrological Forecast for December '06 by Amelia Shea

"The inevitability of shadows is the burden of sunlight."...Dane Rudyhar

There is a powerful Full Moon this month at 7:25 pm Monday December 4 EST. Full Moons are often a time to get a glimpse of what is hidden and this month it presents us with the opportunity to see what we have overlooked or hidden from ourselves over time. It's a time to question assumptions and long held beliefs and look at what we have ignored or disregarded along the way.

At the time of the Full Moon Uranus the planet of revolution and revelation squares the Sun and Moon. Uranus the enlightener is always ready to disrupt outmoded ways of doing things and this month it affects how we think and use our minds. It is a good time to be open to how we might view things in a more open and progressive manner.

Ideas and perceptions which challenge stale thought patterns may abound and it's a good time to take them seriously. As one astrologer so aptly has written, "It's not only necessary to think outside the box, it's time to dispense with the box altogether."*

Saturn squares Mercury and trines Pluto at this Full Moon lending the ability to think with more perception, depth and clarity.

Also this month Saturn stations and turns retrograde on Dec 5. From the 5th through April 19 , '07 when it will turn direct it is an excellent time to be rethinking our personal sense of authenticity and creativity and how to more effectively express them in our everyday lives.

Jupiter has newly entered Sagittarius bringing a sense of hope, optimism and expansiveness to our view of the future. This month Jupiter will be traveling with the Sun , Venus and Pluto Mars and Mercury all in the sign Sagittarius. This fire sign is known for its exuberance and sense of adventure and it's a good month to guard against overdoing, overextending and impulsiveness.

Extra care and caution are advised while driving and with communications when Mercury and Mars are conjunct from the 8th through the 16th.
